Anaplasmosis—Cattle Killer

QUESTION: What is this strange-sounding disease "anaplasmosis" and how serious is it?

ANSWER: A blood disease of cattle which is spreading slowly throughout the country. Veterinarians say it's the third most costly cattle disease in America.

QUESTION: How does it affect cattle?

ANSWER: The heart beats faster, the skin may get yellowish, milk production may fall; the animal gets listless and loses weight rapidly. A laboratory test often shows the "dot-like" picture in red blood cells.

QUESTION: What causes anaplasmosis?

ANSWER: A tiny parasite which is sometimes carried by flies, mosquitoes and ticks. Anaplasmosis may also be spread by unsterilized vaccination needles and dehorning knives.

QUESTION: Is there a vaccine available?

ANSWER: No, but research veterinarians are attempting to develop drugs for treating the disease, but they have not yet found one that is entirely satisfactory. Many infected animals can be saved, however, if treatment is started soon enough.

NOTE:—Due to space limitations, general questions cannot be handled by this column.

QUESTION: Do cattle die from it?

ANSWER: Yes. From one-fifth to one-third of the infected animals die. The ones that don't die remain carriers.

Visual Communication
Lighthouses have been in use since the 1300s, smoke signals since before the discovery of America, and the "telegraph" since late in the 1700s. (The first "telegraph," invented by a Frenchman, was a machine consisting of an upright post with several pivots across which indicated different letters and numbers, depending on their arrangement.) Later, there were signal rockets. Today man's eyes are relieved of the need for such visual communication—thanks to radio, telephone and cable—but the demands on them are increased a hundredfold by the stresses of modern living.

Boxes Storage Space
The cost of any piece of household equipment includes the box in which the manufacturer packs it. Before discarding that box, consider whether it is worth saving to keep equipment in when not in use. Equipment which is used only at certain seasons of the year needs a storage container which fits it conveniently, holds it in best shape, keeps out dust, and is sturdy and thick enough to protect against accidental knocks and jolts. The original box, therefore, may be ideal for storing such varied items as empty canning jars and utility glasses, blankets, portable electric fans and heaters, and electric pads.

VENEZUELAN IRON ADDS NEW CHAPTER TO BALTIMORE PORT

The busy port of Baltimore where railroads and steel-using plants are expanding facilities for handling increased ore shipments expected from "iron mountain" discoveries in Venezuela, has an event-packed history that goes back to colonial days.

Baltimore was chartered in 1729 as a potential tobacco port. Situated at the head of the Patuxent river inlet of Chesapeake bay, it was handicapped at first by competition with the already numerous shore settlements catering to the shipping needs of near-by planters for their products.

The early traffic in tobacco was disappointing to Baltimore's founders. As late as 1746, the year's record shows only seven ships seeking cargo there. It was not wheat, however, rather than tobacco that Baltimore was to lay the foundation for its future prosperity.

In 1750, the first shipment of flour was loaded at the port. A gambut at the time of the Baltimore harbor was a handsome arrival in England, and started a boom in grain and flour exports which are important to this day. The first success led in turn to other traffic, to the expansion of harbor facilities, the establishment of infant industry, and the rapid growth of the young town.

Many factors played a part in Baltimore's development. One of Uncle Sam's top seaports. In the early days, the famous Baltimore Clippers, product of pioneer shipbuilding along Chesapeake shore, brought romance and speed to the port's overseas trade. The railways—initiated in 1827 by the Baltimore and Ohio to meet the challenge of the Erie canal—gave this city overland links with the growing regions opened up by the American surge westward.

"Mountain Sickness"
In cattle breeding, "mountain sickness," often struck cattle pastured in the mountains. It was a coming less common. Heredity is credited with lessening mortality from the disease.

Generations of mountain-raised cattle have built up resistance to the effects of high altitude, while those unable to adapt themselves have been eliminated. Studies reported by Dr. R. F. Bourne, a Fort Collins, Colo., veterinarian, show resistance to the disease and even thrive on summer ranges at altitudes of 9,000 to 11,000 feet.

When the disease is brought into the mountain ranges from the lowlands, many died at altitudes of above 8,000 feet. A shortage of "mountain sickness," often terminated in heart failure.

Many attempts by early stockmen to improve their herds by bringing in high-quality bulls failed when the animals were unable to adapt themselves to the high ranges.

Today, however, some of the finest strains of beef cattle are doing well at altitudes which formerly were considered too high for successful stock raising.

Farm Bureau Activities

(By BYRON DYER)

The general public has got to take notice of the adverse report on recent elections in the country and do something about the situation as a group if these corrupt practices are to be stopped. Dr. Marvin S. Pittman stated to the West Side Farm Bureau Tuesday night.

Dr. Pittman referred to the situation now being publicized in Florida and Maryland and the part hoodlums played in those elections, according to the reports. People elected to public office have to listen to those that put them in. If hoodlums finance the campaigns and elect them, then these officials will naturally have to listen to that group. The general public, Dr. Pittman thinks, will have to finance the campaigns so that public officials can represent all the people when elected. The plan used in South Carolina of letting all candidates visit the same town or community on the same day was recommended also by Dr. Pittman.

The Bulloch county quartette, composed of Carl Bishop, Otis and Charles Joe Hollingsworth and Bernard Banks, with Dean Winske at the piano, entertained the group with several songs.

The need for building such community organizations all over the state was discussed briefly by Bright McCown, former Richmond county agent.

Christianity or Communism will eventually rule the world, Rev. T. L. Harnesberger stated to the Stillson Farm Bureau Wednesday night. There is no place on the same earth for both to prevent the Communism from being different for them to exist together, he thinks. Communism's first objective is to eliminate Christianity when the leaders elect to invade any country.

The United States made a grave mistake when it did not stand by China to prevent the Communism form of government to move in, Rev. Harnesberger stated.

Dr. John Daniel Deal was presented as the new doctor at Portia by the Farm Bureau president, Denver L. Akins. Dr. Deal stated that he was opening his office there on July 15th. The Portia group used a couple of short motion pictures as a part of their program.

Paul D. Akins visited each of the three Farm Bureaus during the week and reviewed the features of the Georgia motor vehicle safety-responsibility law. Mr. Akins pointed out that it is not compulsory to have insurance under this law, but that every driver in Georgia will be required after July 1 to either be able to put up a bond of $11,000, or have insurance covering that amount of liability, or, if involved in a wreck, stood the chance of losing their license to drive and for their car or truck. The purpose of the law, Mr. Akins stated, is to make sure that a person involved in an automobile accident is either able to pay damages, or neither he nor his car may again operate in Georgia until the requirements are met.

Many motorists do not know what kind of insurance they do have, Mr. Akins pointed out. He urged that in such events they should contact their insurance representative and find out just what coverage they did have.

West Side served a barbecue supper. Stillson had fried chicken, and Portia had barbecued ham. Ogeechee is not meeting next week because they moved their time up to July 4th for the annual picnic. Warnock is having a supper meeting Wednesday night and the Stillson chapter meets on Thursday night.

ELEVEN FANCY TOMATOES GIFT FOR EDITOR'S TABLE

A bunch of fancy tomatoes—eleven beauties—came to the office last week from the garden of friend Mack Leator, as a casual evidence of his good will and recognition of the editor's taste. The bunch weighed three and one-half pounds, and were all at the stage of maturity.

State Reaps Heavy Taxes On Gasoline

Atlanta, July 2.—With the vacation season moving into full swing, Georgia motor vehicle owners are reported burning 2,000,000 gallons of gasoline a day on which the state takes $140,000 daily in state taxes on gasoline.

A study of official state figures for the first few months of the year indicates that use of automobiles and trucks will exceed last year's record, according to Neil W. Printup, executive secretary of the Georgia Petroleum Industries Committee.

"With all signs pointing toward a boom vacation season, drivers undoubtedly will set new marks in mileage and gasoline consumption," he said.

On a daily basis, Georgia highway users in the first months of last year averaged 1,870,000 gallons of gasoline daily on which the state took $130,000 in state gasoline taxes every twenty-four hours.

What Are Equal Rights?

WE GET SORT OF confused sometimes at the vehement legal attempts at enforcement of the doctrine of equal rights under the multi-faceted form of democracy.

Too often the confusion arises from a conflict with the democratic principle of majority rule—greatest good to the greatest number. An honest recognition of equal rights would give equal weight to those who favor a proposal and those who oppose. In case of equal numbers, honesty of administration would give weight to those who pay the bill. That man who pays is the greater burden bearer, eh?

Now, as to the matter of race discrimination—an intermingling of races on equal terms—those who oppose are honestly entitled to the same consideration per individual as those who advocate equality. The man who wants to sit alone at a table (particularly if he is paying the bill) is morally entitled to that right of seclusion.

The man who wants to sit with another, is morally only entitled only to do so upon consent of that other party to the sitting. And by this logic we want to insist that those who want racial equality are entitled to it for themselves—only to the degree that this is acceptable to the other party to the equalization. No white man (or negro) ought to have a right to impose himself upon the presence of another who has equal moral and civil right to dissent from the equalization. That person who insists upon his wishes in preference to the equal wishes of another—well, he is not honest with his neighbor with equal rights.

Now, this brings to the point of schools. Reasonable equality could mean only equal—and not joint—facilities. The whites and negroes who insist upon joint facilities are going beyond the reasonable and honorable provisions which seek for the betterment of community life.

Government Control

THE UNITED STATES Chamber of Commerce recently published a monograph called Economic Policies for National Defense which makes some interesting observations on the problems and difficulties of price control. Among them, it says this: "Once a ceiling is placed on a single item, it becomes necessary to control all the factors of production involved. And as in trying to trace hidden taxes, the process is endless. Furthermore, in order to secure an equitable distribution of goods in short supply, prices of which are controlled at levels below those that would result from free market operations, some form of government rationing may be necessary. This is especially true for basic items in the cost of living."

"Meat is a most conspicuous example. We are once again running into the complications we experienced a few years back. The government can place ceilings at the retail and wholesale levels, and on the meat packers—but the government cannot control the supply of meat. The price stabilization authorities have already found it necessary to urge buyers to avoid resort to black markets."

In every section of the country, packers report that the supply of livestock coming into the price-controlled market is very far below normal. There has been a considerable amount of criticism of farmers and ranchers for this. But the fact remains that people will not sell their wares, whether they be cattle or anything else, at artificial price levels which they consider unfair and too low. In the long run, such policies can lead only to diminished production—and more inflation.

Two more sentences from the Chamber of Commerce's study are well worth remembering. There are: "It is... imperative that price controls be viewed as temporary. Continuation of direct price controls, whether by freeze, margin, or other techniques, beyond a short period of time will lead to curtailment of production, misallocation of resources and impairment of defense effort."

Free Pills For All

THE AVERAGE AMERICAN family spends 15 percent of its annual income on liquor, recreation and tobacco. This is a big slice of the family budget but so far no one has come up with a scheme for the federal government to provide "free" recreational trips for everybody to their favorite bar and tobaccoists.

There is much talk of the heavy burden of medical expense to the average family, yet only four per cent of the average family income goes to pay doctor bills. Most American families have the resources to pay for adequate medical care if they would give it the priority it deserves.

We don't want or need compulsory health insurance. Its cost to the nation both in dollars and personal liberty would be intolerable. Under Great Britain's National Health Service some doctors have as many as four thousand patients on their lists and often see as many as twenty patients an hour—every three minutes. This inferior assembly line service costs the British people twice what was budgeted for it in its first year of operation. Some 400,000 additional employees—clerks, administrators, bookkeepers, and tax collectors—siphon off millions of dollars of the medical funds before they can be used to provide any medical care for the people.

In the United States voluntary health insurance plans will soon provide 75 per cent of our population. This is the irrefutable answer to the system of compulsion now proposed—a system which would be detrimental to medical science and the health of the people, and which would rob both doctor and patient of their individual freedom.

Still Remains Time Volunteer For Service

Young men who have already received their pre-induction physical examination and are standing by awaiting call from their selective service centers have until July 15 to volunteer for the service of their choice, according to Major John C. Landrum, state director of Marine Corps recruiting.

The Marine Corps needs volunteers now. Under their current expansion program many vacancies are now open for young men between the ages of 17-31, physically and mentally qualified for Armed Forces service. Requirements for enlistment in the United States Marines now conform identically with other branches of the service.

Marines with dependents may be enlisted for active duty with the Marine Corps Reserves. Former Marines are not required to undergo recruit training if within prior service have completed basic training.

A Marine recruiter will be at the Statesboro Post Office each Monday, 9:30 to 12:30 o'clock.

Pasture Rotation Called Key to Livestock Health

The grass isn't always greener in the next pasture, but it's likely to be a lot healthier for livestock, a bulletin from veterinary medical authorities points out.

Pasture or animal rotation is as necessary to the health of livestock as rotation is to successful crop production, the bulletin adds. Spraying pastures against ticks by practicing complete rotation for each species of livestock they raise. This calls for either keeping all livestock off a given pasture for two years, or shifting pigs, sheep or horses to grounds that were used by cattle the previous year.

Such rotation is necessary because continuous use of pastures, lots, or ranges for the same species of animals causes the land to become heavily contaminated with parasites and disease germs. The only way to keep the parasites and germs from getting at their favorite host, thereby starting them out, is to keep the land free of the parasites and germs by rotating the animals. For example, the bulletin says, sheep do not thrive in cows or other animals, and the germs they carry usually die within one to two years if sheep are removed.

Pasture management as practiced by most farmers consists of rotation every three to eight weeks. This system is good for the pasture, the bulletin says, but it is effective from the standpoint of parasite control.

For best results, at least a year and preferably two years should elapse before any herd or flock is returned to its original pasture.

Show How People Lived In Pre-Industrial New England

Mill stones more than 100 years old still do service at the historic Wright grist mill at Old Sturbridge Village, Mass. museum and crafts center. During the process of grinding grain, the stones become glazed and must be sharpened periodically by experienced millers.

Sometimes ago the museum workers lifted the large grinding stones to prepare them for sharpening and the exacting task fell to Mr. Charles A. Almquist of Milford, Conn., one of New England's few old-time millers. The stone, which turns during grinding, weigh about 1800 pounds each and only one can be sharpened at a time. The job is done by hand with a small steel-headed hammer that resurfaces the face of the stone each time the hammer is dropped by the miller. The bed stones, which are stationary, weigh approximately 1500 pounds.

The stones were imported more than 100 years ago from France and now serve at the historic grist mill, Hebron, Conn. Almquist once operated the museum's mill until his retirement a year ago. Earl L. Morey, present miller, himself an old-time miller, assisted Mr. Almquist. The mill is one of the 26 communal buildings comprising this re-created New England town which opened in 1900. It is one of the several functional craft shops where students and tourists may see how people worked and lived in pre-industrial New England.

British Navy Dress

Another British tradition falls a casualty to austerity, with the Royal Navy's decision to abandon its full dress uniform—cocked hats, frock coats, and epaulettes included. Such formal attire, with national variations, has long been a "must" for naval officers of the leading seafaring powers. Now, however, most city nations have either discarded or modified the dressy costume. There is even a chance the United States may decide against reinstating its own cocked hat for regular postwar formal dress use.

City Refuse Disposal

Both incineration and the sanitary landfill method of city refuse disposal are increasing in popularity. Still popular, but on the decline, is the old-fashioned method of getting rid of garbage by feeding it to the hogs. Thirty-six per cent of the cities queried in a survey reported that they used the sanitary landfill method of disposal and 27 per cent reported disposal through incineration. Hog feeding as a method of garbage disposal is used by 31 per cent of the reporting cities.

Diabetics In Industry

About 250,000 diabetics are in the labor force in the United States, and the number is growing from year to year. Studies show that the work record of diabetics in industry is generally satisfactory as compared with non-diabetics. The increase in the number of employed diabetics reflect their gains in longevity, and also that, thanks to insulin, few diabetic children now die of the disease, but grow up to become productive members of society.

Cellulose From Short Lint

Approximately 50,000 bales of short staple cotton are expected to be consumed annually as a source of cellulose. The possibility of utilizing ordinary short staple cotton for this purpose was originated as a war-time project. Under War Production board auspices, a lint cutter was developed to slice regular short staple fine enough to use as a substitute for cotton lint.

Circulate Petition On School Merger Issue

The first step toward merging the city school system with the Bulloch county system was made here last week when a petition was drawn up and made ready for circulation asking the mayor of Statesboro to call an election in which citizens of the city might vote on the plan.

Plans for the merger were worked out at a joint meeting of the city and county school boards together with the city council. The petition cites Code Section 32-1201 of the 1933 Code of the State of Georgia, in requesting the mayor to call an election.

According to Mayor J. Gilbert Cone, the petition will need about 300 names to authorize him to call the election. The petition must be signed by 10 per cent of the approximately 1,200 registered voters in Statesboro. Should the mayor call an election then the majority of those voting will determine the final action.

A shortage of building materials is no handicap to a town determined to be a Champion!
If you can't build a gleaming swimming pool, perhaps you can fix up a "swimmin' hole" in a nearby creek or lake—or if that new theatre has to wait awhile, perhaps you can show movies in a schoolhouse.
Yes, there are many ways to keep a town in the championship class—priorities are not needed for such things as marking scenic and historic sites, cleaning store windows, encouraging religious, educational and recreational activities, eliminating junk piles.
A Champion Home Town knows there are plenty of prize-winning projects that require only vision, enthusiasm and good ol' fashioned elbow-grease!

Brittle Stars Blow Tops, Shed Arms, Grow New Ones

Consider the brittle star, shy and streamlined cousin of the flatfish. When handled or disturbed, it can cast off any of its five arms, growing new ones at leisure. In some cases it can literally grow its top then gradually re-cover. Rare specimens of the brittle star have been reported taken recently from California waters off Santa Catalina Island.

The brittle stars, while rare in many of their forms and little known to the average seashore vacationer, are among the commonest creatures on the floors of the seven seas. Something like 1,500 species are recognized. The majority live on the ocean bottom in deep water. They form the largest of five classes of echinoderms, spiny-skinned sea denizens.

The five arms, or rays, of the brittle star are generally long and slender and capable of snakelike movement. Hence, its popular alias is serpent star. The scientific name, Ophiuroidea, means serpent-tails. The name "brittle star" means, of course, from the manner in which most species can break off all or parts of their arms, which may reach two feet in length. Round or pentagonal in shape, the central body varies from pinhead size to as much as two inches in diameter.

The fact that brittle stars are fragile explains why these odd scavengers are little in evidence in shallow waters where waves break. They are abundant, however, where seaweed is thick or in the crevices of rocks and coral. Tropical waters hold the greatest variety, colors ranging from near black to white. Colder northern waters hold the greatest numbers. They form an important part of the diet of north Atlantic haddock and cod.

Divorce Rate In America Continues on Downgrade

Divorces granted in the United States in 1949 show a decline for the third year in a row. The estimate for the year was 100,000, which is a reduction of 7 per cent from the 1948 total of 107,000, and of 38 per cent from the peak year 1946.

Despite this trend, the number of divorces granted last year was the sixth highest in the country's history, exceeding that for every year prior to 1918 except one, a one-fifth higher than the figure for 1942, the first year of United States participation in World War II.

The decline since 1946 was sharpest in the North. Somewhat less marked in the South, and least in the West. In seven widely separated cities—Buffalo, Erie, Jacksonville, Knoxville, Minneapolis, New York and Portland—the decline was more than 50 per cent.

Some indication that the postwar divorce decline is noting its end is seen by the statistics.
Each of 59 major cities reported fewer divorces in 1949 than in 1946, but 15 of these cities showed increases in 1949. In Miami and in the divorce center of Reno the increases were substantial. In Miami the total rose from 4,451 in 1948 to 4,707 last year, and in Reno from 5,782 to 5,902.

Berkelium Radioactive

Berkelium is a new chemical element, whose discovery was announced early in 1950 at the University of California, located in the city of Berkeley, after which the element is named. It is number 97 in the list of elements and its chemical symbol is Bk. It was produced in very minute amounts by bombarding another element called americium, which was also discovered at the University of California a few years ago, with atomic particles from a cyclotron. Berkelium is highly radioactive and in less than five hours, half of a given amount will decay to another element.

Making Farming Safer

Although farm machinery and equipment actually account for a very small percentage of all farm accidents, inventors constantly supply manufacturers with new safety gadgets to protect the life of tractor and machinery operators. The National Safety Council is constantly testing mechanisms designed to make farming a safer and more profitable occupation. The latest safety item for tractors is a device that automatically turns off the ignition of the tractor when it rolls or tips.

Origin of Alphabet

Whatever nation originated the alphabet, it is generally conceded that the Phoenicians prepared and launched it for world use. Those of the Mediterranean devised a simple, effective system of 22 letters. In the process, they apparently took a selection of picture characters of such everyday objects as an ox or camel; made crude letters of them, and gave them names. All consonants, this simplified, easy-to-read and write alphabet was developed to allow rapid communication in business dealings.

ERYSIPELAS TAKES ON VARIED FORMS

Many day doves of swine are ruined because owners delay in finding out just what is wrong with their hogs.
For example, two or three lame pigs in a drove or a few with big, jagged joints, curing ears or bob tails may not seem at all serious. But more often than not, these simple

Swine erysipelas, perhaps more often than almost any other livestock disease, may appear in a masked, so-called "atypical" form. It can kill a pig without the animal having appeared sick. Or, it may cause an affected hog to linger on for months without normal gain or growth. And the disease is further confusing because some outbreaks of erysipelas may look much like true hog cholera. Of course, the answer to this is that erysipelas are entirely different. In some localities cholera may not have appeared for years, whereas erysipelas may be a more or less recurring problem. Yet hog cholera can jump over wide distances very easily. And, when that happens, the farmer who makes a quick conclusion that the disease is erysipelas is in for some very serious losses. Similarly, if cholera is suspected, erysipelas is the real offender, the losses can be heavy.

The only safe rule when symptoms appear, like those mentioned above, a prompt veterinary diagnosis is essential and a sudden flare with serious losses may follow.

RUTH BEAVER

Out Highway 301 close to Lott Creek bridge the Fred Darby is building a new home. It is almost completely hidden from the highway, but work is progressing on it and from all reports it will be one of the show places in our community. For several years the Darby lived in Jacksonville, where they had a lovely home on the river. Their friends here are delighted to have them come back home again. — Katherine and Zolke Whitehurst reached Statesboro several weeks ago, and no sooner had they reached home than Peggy, their daughter, was off to Savannah to be an attendant in her cousin's wedding. There were parties given from morning into the night, and Peggy was on a whirl all during her visit down here. Peggy's friends are delighted she has come back to make her home here again. — Bess and Bob Winburn have endeavored themselves to the people of our town during the years they have been making Statesboro their home. Bob is being readied after 10 years as consular agent at the State Department in Washington, D. C., making his talk before the students and faculty at the college he said, "Old controllers, like old soldiers, never die—they just fade away." Bob and Bess were both presented gifts from the college. Bob an engraved fountain pen and Bess a silver covered dish. Their many friends are going to miss them not only at the college, but on the streets of our city. — With the smoke from the tobacco barns being seen on all the farms it is not difficult for us to know that tobacco season is almost here. The warehouses are being made ready and some of the men and their families have already arrived to make preparation for the opening. The peanut boys are seen everywhere on the streets with their cry of boiled peanuts, and we know mid-summer is here. The signs are of all indications. — Families are leaving daily on their vacations. Nita and George Prather and their daughters are on a trip to North Carolina, and coming home for a visit is A. K. Anson. A. K. and Hubert were transferred from Baltimore last year to California, where he is with the army. Just recently her parents, Fred Lanier, and Ouida and Lannie Simmons had a wonderful trip out West to see them. A. K. is looking forward to being in Baltimore again, but is very ready to tell her friends she had much rather it be Georgia. Her friends feel the same way about it. — Dr. Donald Neil was given a wonderful picture of Polly and their young son Joseph recently. The picture has been in Clinton's Studio window, and surely none of his portraits has more pleasing expression than Joseph. — Will see you AROUND TOWN.

HIGHWAY WRECK HEADED FOR COURT

Visit To County Hospital
First Stopping Point For Driver With Choice Liquor

Seriously injured in a highway wreck on Route 80 just inside Bulloch county near Blitchton, a driver listed as Harry E. Blackstock, 17 West Buena Vista avenue, Atlanta, stopped for recuperation at the Bulloch County Hospital when taken in tow by county patrolmen last Friday about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The hospital stop was due to broken bones and serious internal injuries received when he ran off the embankment and overturned his truck in a ditch.

Besides a charge of drunken driving the court charges include a number of other alleged offenses, including the transportation of something like 120 gallons of high grade liquor in the car not licensed for that class of transportation.

According to Sheriff Deal, county policemen and state police participating in the arrest, Blackstock was driving Statesboro under the influence of whisky when the accident occurred. It was apparent that he had been drinking off the road and overturned when a tire went flat. Officials said that the truck contained forty-one cases of whisky, some of which was destroyed when the truck overturned.

Other officials investigating the case included Chief of County Police Edgar Hart, County Policeman M. E. Sowell, and Sheriff Miles of Bryan county. Sheriff Miles said that the truck was coming from the direction of Savannah. The truck had the name "Southern Hotel and Restaurant Supply" on the side, and the tag was registered in the name of a Mr. Johnson, of Conley, Ga.

PURVIS LOSES LIFE IN MORNING BLAZE

Charred Body Found On Cot At Sleeping Place
On West Proctor Street

In a fire for which the alarm was sounded around 5:15 this morning, T. C. Purvis lost his life in his sleeping quarters in a shack on West Proctor street, understood to have been occupied jointly by him and the owner, "Goat" Barnes.

The body, reposing partly off the bed, is understood to have been burned almost beyond recognition. Members of his family living elsewhere were contacted and gave instruction to hold an inquest. Funeral plans will be determined upon their arrival.

Around sixty-five years of age, Mr. Purvis had been a resident of Statesboro for approximately forty years. His original home is understood to have been at Mendes in Taitland county.

His widow, the former Miss Ouida Williams, daughter of the late H. R. Williams, has been making her home with a daughter in Atlanta. Another daughter lives in Coral Gables, Fla., and still another and one son live in Georgia.

An accountant of skill, he has recently been engaged in that type of work for the public. Upon his coming to Statesboro for some time he was an employee of the Sea Island Bank.

R. P. Mikell, county president, talked briefly on the progress Farm Bureau has made in the Ogeechee community as well as in the county. He concurred with Mr. McConnell's statement that the only way farmers can help themselves in working with other groups is to build an organization just as strong as the others now have.

The Ivanhoe group held its meeting Friday night and planned to finish the club house improvements Saturday, July 14. A month ago the group started enlarging the housing facilities at their club house, but it is not entirely complete. A large glassed-in porch is being built on the back of the club house.

Weekly Activities In Farm Bureaus

By BYRON DYER.

Ogeechee Farm Bureau's July 4th meeting brought all the members of that chapter as well as many visitors to Williams Landing for the outing.

J. A. Hart, chairman for the serving committee on this annual picnic affair, stated that although there were lots of people, 400 or 500 present, ample of food was available.

Homer Melton, the Ogeechee president, expressed the belief that still others that were invited would have been present had the weather not been so threatening all the morning.

Bright McConnell, former Richmond county agent, was the speaker for the annual event. Mr. McConnell urged that every community try to build a stronger farm organization and to promote more activities such as the Ogeechee group was doing on this July 4th. Mr. McConnell stated that Georgia is the best county in Georgia and that the Georgia Forestry Association announced today.

The cash award will be presented to the citizens of the county showing the greatest progress in woods care prevention and suppression during the next nine months. B. M. Lufburrow, executive secretary of the sponsoring association, reported. He said the purpose of the contest is fourfold:

1. Reduce the number of forest fires;
2. Reduce total acreage burned;
3. Stimulate interest in better forest protection;

4. Create a greater sense of personal responsibility regarding forest fire prevention among all citizens—every man, woman and child.

Only counties co-operating with the fire control system of the Georgia Forestry Commission for one or more years prior to July 1, 1951, may participate. But Mr. Lufburrow pointed out that Bulloch county may meet that requirement. He said the "Keep Green" county contest will be conducted with full co-operation from Statesboro. Guyton DeLoach and his organization.
